

The 100+ Oldest North Carolina Conventional Non-Public Schools

< Return to the Non-Public Education Home Page

Since the State of North Carolina did not establish a state government non-public school agency until 1961, most of the information contained in the table which follows was voluntarily submitted during the 2004-2005 school year by North Carolina's non-public schools. The years given within this document are those when each listed North Carolina non-public school began its initial operation. While these schools have operated continuously since then, some of them have changed names or, at times, operated with various other configurations of grade levels. Most of these schools have web sites which you may want to visit.
